

How to write an introduction to an essay

COMPOSITION

- entry
- main part
- conclusion

The absence in the composition of one of the elements of the composition is considered as an error and is taken into account when assessing. The composition of the composition should be thought out and clear. All the main ideas in the work must be carefully justified by analyzing the text of literary works. Still do not know how to write an essay? Check out our Essays For Sale.

INTRODUCTION - introduces the topic, gives preliminary, general information about the problem that is behind the proposed topic.

In the introduction can:

- contain the answer to the question asked on the topic;
- submitted your opinion;
- contain a fact from the author's biography or a historical period, if this information is important for the subsequent analysis of the text;
- formulated your understanding of literary terms, if they are used in the title of the topic.

Writing is knowledge of the text, thought and literacy.

The MAIN PART of the work is an analysis of a literary work in accordance with a given theme.

The main part should be avoided:

- retelling of a literary work;
- presentation of information that is not directly related to the topic.

In the main part it is necessary to demonstrate the knowledge of literary material, the ability to logically, argumentatively and stylistically competently express their thoughts. The main part is to check how well the topic is understood.

The task of the CONCLUSION is to sum up, summarize what has been said, complete the text, once again drawing attention to the most important thing.

The final part should be:

- short, but capacious;
- organically linked to the previous presentation.

In conclusion, the personal attitude of the writer to the work, its heroes, the problem can be expressed. It should be stated correctly, without excessive enthusiastic assessments, have a clearly defined meaning and should be prepared by the material of the main part. Clear, strictly appropriate to the theme of the last paragraph of the essay is able to brighten up many shortcomings. An unfinished essay is no more attractive than an unfinished pie.

Some secrets how to write an essay and pass the exam

- Do not try to notch by heart texts of the ready compositions if subject will be different, it will have a negative impact on the result.
- If at first you thought that you can not write an essay on any of the topics proposed to you, do not panic, sit down, calm down. Most likely, after a while the situation will not seem so critical, and you will remember something.
- Try to write everything you know on each topic. Then try to organize everything you have recorded in some way.

- Carefully read all the topics, try to determine the exact lexical meaning of each word of the topic, and only then the overall lexical meaning of the phrase or statement. Consider the direction of the topic, correlate the topic of the essay with your knowledge and decide whether you can write an essay on this topic, or it is better to abandon it.
- When choosing a topic, rely on your knowledge and software products. Don't try to create a literary masterpiece. Now you need to prove that you can competently write an essay.
- Write down the main points that you would like to say in your essay, build them logically, this will be your initial plan. Refer to it while writing the text, it will help you keep the logical line and therefore reveal the theme.
- Correlate the volumes of the introduction, conclusion and main part. The largest in size should be the main part, the introduction-about half as small, the conclusion - the smallest in volume. Remember that any "distortions" with the size of the composition can also negatively affect the final result.
- Do not forget that the epigraph-the decoration of the composition, but if you are not sure whether it fits, or inaccurately know the text and punctuation marks, it is better not to write it at all, for the lack of an epigraph, no one will reduce the score.
- And most importantly, when you are going to the exam, tell yourself that you can do everything, that you can do everything.